Can The Indianapolis Colts Win The Super Bowl

Pro football playoffs begin this weekend and the Indianapolis colts are prepared and ready to defend their AFC Championship. A consistently powerful team, the Colts have won at least 12 regular season games over the last seven years! But 2010 proved to be a little more of an obstacle. They were at a mere 6-6 record with just 4 games remaining in the regular season, and even trailed the Jaguars in the AFC South. But they were able to finish the season with a solid 10-6 record this year, beating the Jaguars for the top of the NFC South and the number 3 seed for the post season schedule. Sadly their offense faced a lot of trouble this season. Dallas Clark, Austin Collie, Joseph Addai all sustained season ending accidents. But lucky for the Indianapolis Colts they still have the legendary Peyton Manning. He averaged 288 yards per match, and even went 3 games throwing 11 picks, the worst of his professional career, but they're still in the playoffs! Prior to the season beginning the Colts were ranked in the odds as among the favorites to win the Super Bowl odds this year.

Even after battles, Manning faults, and injury losses, odds makers still think they're strong contenders to take the title for Super Bowl XLV. Sportsbook probabilities list the Indianapolis colts as 16/1 prospects for winning it this year. But it is all going to boil down to Peyton Manning, so he best not be having one of his off games even for a instant in the post-season.

In recent Colts news, Indianapolis Colts linebacker Clint Session missed practice, and let team owner Jim Irsay let everybody know. When he was touting a Colts promotion, Irsay stated he would fly in the champion from anywhere due to the fact, hey, "this is the NFL" and he takes his "dream-making seriously!" Reggie Wayne is his leading receiver with 1355 yards and 6 TD's. The Indianapolis Colts defense ranked 23rd for points allowed and 25th against the rush, which is a Nfl betting concern in this matchup against the New York Jets as New York ranked 4th in rushing offense.

They take on the New York Jets in playoffs game 2 this Wild Card Weekend. When wagering on the Super Bowl note that they had trouble stopping the run a year ago in the AFC Championship competition against the New York Jets, yet still managed to win that game at 30-17. Lucky for Indianapolis, they're going to avoid competing the Pats until the AFC Champions match, but they're going to still have difficulty with the Steeler in round 2.
