

Published based on Football Probabilities - Pats At Browns

Football Probabilities - Pats At Browns

Football probabilities are beginning to prefer the Patriots as the top faves with the odds NFL to win the AFC tournament and perhaps even win the Super Bowl. NFL prospects anticipations continue to be low for the rebuilding Browns who are going to be an longshot with the prospects NFL in almost all of their games this year.

The Browns will sponsor the New England Patriots with a telecast on CBS established for 1:05 PM Eastern. The sports book opened up with Patriots as a 5.5 point road favorite and with an over/under established for 44.

The New England Patriots have a record of 6-1 straight up and 4-2-1 with the NFL gambling probabilities. Patriots has gone over the total in 5 of 7 games this year. The New England are arriving off a 28-18 home pay out over the Minnesota Vikings for their 5th consecutive win. They've got the best record in the league at this time, but the prospects makers appear to be conscious that there's the likelihood of a disappointment when they meet the Cleveland Browns this Sunday. The Pats are a great squad, but sometimes it feels like their wins are being stolen from the other team, not earned. This squad does not have the best statistics in the NFL but they are still finding strategies to win. This past week they put on the Jets down to 0 points and landed three field goals for an really minimal scoring 9-0 win. The Jets offense was a bit slack, however the Pats defense was additionally looking fairly great.

New England has the top scoring offense in the league whereas their defense rates 21st for points granted but has shown improved play after a rocky start. Quarterback Tom Brady has a 96.6 Qb rating as well as a 12/4 touchdown/interception percentage.

Cleveland possesses a record of 2-5 straight up and 3-4 with the NFL wagering lines. The Cleveland Browns have risen over the total in four of their 7 matches. Cleveland is arriving off a bye week that followed a 30-17 win at New Orleans wherein they were 12 point long shots.

Rookie Colt McCoy was the starting quarterback the past two competitions for Cleveland and could start again as 1st stringer Jake Delhomme is uncertain while second stringer Seneca Wallace is sketchy.

Cleveland ranks 31st in the league for scoring but a good 12th for points allowed. Running back Peyton Hillis has been a crucial resource with 460 yards and a 4.4 yards per carry average with 5 touchdowns so far this year.

Patriots has covered 19 of their prior 28 competitions as a road fave. Cleveland has paid out in 8 of their past ten AFC matches and in 8 of their previous eleven as an underdog. New England Patriots has gone below the total in 6 of their last 7 matches as a road favorite whilst the Browns have gone over the total in four of their previous 5 as an underdog.

Patriots has covered the NFL prospects in their last 4 meetings with the Cleveland Browns.

Learn more about football betting rules here.

You can also find this article published on Football Probabilities - Pats At Browns, and on the tag pages Browns

, football, new england patriots, nfl prospects, nfl wagering lines, total.