NFL Gambling – Quarterback Problems In Week 8

Has there ever been a season in Football wagering with more quarterback accidents? It seems every single week a quarterback gets injured and influences your NFL free online bet at the online sports book. There are a variety of qb problems for this week too. Let's take a look.

Brett Favre - The biggest news surrounding the qbs in Week 8 is with Minnesota's Brett. He is listed as sketchy for Sunday's game versus New England. Favre has said he will attempt to play so unless head coach Brad Childress steps in, you are able to figure Favre will start.

David Garrard - The Jacksonville jaguars are definitely not the same squad without Garrard at quarterback. He missed last week's competition with a concussion but he has practice this week and is supposed to play at Dallas.

Max Hall - The Cardinals anticipate that Max Hall will start this week's competition against Buccaneers. Hall was wounded last week but he has practiced this week and head coach Ken Whisenhunt said that he should start.

Bruce Gradkowski - He didn't practice on Wednesday and it appears like Jason Campbell will get the start again for the Oakland Raiders. That is not necessarily great news if you like the Raiders with your NFL wager as Campbell hasn't performed all that well this season.

Matthew Stafford - The Detroit Lions will be getting Stafford back into the roster this week. Actually, he's not even posted on the injury report so it is possible to expect to see him under center on Sunday against the Redskins.

Vince Young - The Titans are anticipating Young to return this week for their game against San Diego. Kerry Collins has played fairly well in relief of Young but Young is still the starting qb.

Alex Smith - He is out this week for the competition versus Denver. The 49ers have determined to go with 3rd-string qb Troy Smith instead of backup David Carr and that could be good news if you're thinking about San Francisco in NFL sports gambling odds.

It should furthermore be observed that Dallas quarterback Tony Romo is out for at least the subsequent 6 weeks so Jon Kitna will be starting for Dallas. Looking in advance to next week it seems that Michael Vick will return from injury and be the starting quarterback for Philadelphia, pushing Kevin Kolb to the bench.
