The Pittsburgh steelers are road faves in Football betting internet as they go to the Buffalo Bills on Sunday. NFL betting odds makers saw the Steelers get back on track last week with an impressive come back win that trailed a bad Football gambling performance against New England.

Sportsbook posts the Pittsburgh steelers as the minus 6 point road favorites, with the over under at 43. The Pittsburgh steelers will try to get on the right track for this match against the Buffalo Bills November 28th. The Steelers have been not playing very well since the return of Ben Roethlisberger but they had found strategies to win despite themselves.

Their victory over the Oakland raiders 35-3 was a statement competition and it was a hard fought fight similar to the games between the 2 in the '70s. With the exception of a absence of offense from the Oakland raiders Jason Campbell and Darren McFadden.

The running game has established over the year and is now averaging just over 110 yards per game with Rashard Mendenhall from the back field. The Buffalo Bills are furthermore slamming out an average of 110 yards per competition on the ground with fewer tangible results.

The figures may not show that the Bills offense has been growing but they have made huge strides since the first match of the season. Ryan Fitzpatrick has been powerful in the pocket and is turning into a functional quarterback. On the ground the leaving of Marshawn Lynch has started out the door for CJ Spiller to get more linked to the match but it has furthermore led to Fred Jackson receiving more superior carries and making his mark.

The lauded Pittsburgh steelers defense has been reliable for almost all of the season but they did seem average versus a concentrated Tom Brady and the New England Patriots a few weeks back. Troy Polamalu said prior to the season got going this season that the Pittsburgh steelers defense suffered more from the loss of defensive end Aaron Smith last season than they did from his absence.

Pittsburgh running back Rashard Mendenhall should have a fantastic match for the Pittsburgh steelers on Sunday. Pittsburgh is a great running team in any case and they're likely to pound the ball all day long vs the terrible Bills rush defense.

Aaron Smith was the essential to the Pittsburgh steelers defensive flexibility. The contests of James Harrison and LaMaar Woodley have sustained in Smith's absence. With Smith in the roster, he frees up those 2 defenders to make huge plays in the passing lanes by allowing them more freedom. Smith's leadership on and off the field is furthermore a essential to this Steelers defense. The Pittsburgh steelers defense still has the edge over the Bills offense.

Pittsburgh has all the obvious NFL wagering advantages in this match and ought to be all set and take the Buffalo

Bills seriously thanks to Buffalo's fortune lately. The Pittsburgh steelers had a nice rebound a week ago but must demonstrate that they're able to be a steady value on the board.
