Online Poker Tips - How to Beat The Game Through Hand History Reviews

All of the best players learn poker away from the game. That's how they steadily beat the games that they are playing. Self study will make sure your game doesn't stagnate, will help spot bad plays, and will help you see leaks in your opponent's games. It is easily the best work you can do away from the poker table.

So before it is possible to begin to do hand history reviews it is crucial to buy a piece of software called Holdem Manager (before you say to oneself, here's some promotional waffle about Holdem Manager, please allow it to be known I am in no way affiliated with this product. I wish I was because I adore it).

Holdem Manager is a poker tracking application which keeps track of each hand you play on the web. It allows you to then review all those hands and replay them using a hand replayer and give probabilistic breakdowns of equity and pot chances in those hands. It permits you to study your opponents as well as your own play. It has transformed on line poker. It costs between $50-$80 dependent on whether you buy the professional or starter package, however it is definitely worth the money.

To begin your hand history review, you can filter on a reports tab in Holdem Manager and input all hands played after a particular period of time period, say over a 2 month period. You may then filter all your hands from largest pots lost to win.

Then start a spreadsheet or just utilise a refill pad and note how you lost every big pot over 30 big blinds. I assure you even with some awareness of poker, after you go back over a hand in a replayer you will spot the blatant mistakes easily. Note what the mistake was and move on to the next big pot you lost and repeat it.

Once you have done this you can begin to group the howlers. You will start to see a pattern of where you are making the same mistakes over and over again. In my last big hand history review after a downswing I had 9 mistakes I saw happening way too frequently for my liking. I then put this on a word document and printed it out and read this sheet before I sat down to play a session over the next month. At the end of the month I reviewed my hands played that month and put a line through the bad plays I had removed from my game and highlighted the ones that still stayed. I had the list reduced to one and since then I have cut out that mistake from my game and I'm now on an upward swing and super happy with my game.

I do really believe that once a month you should review all your hand histories of all large pots over 30 big blinds which you either won or lost to keep away those pesky downswings and your game fresh. I'm hoping you enjoyed this straightforward but effective online poker tips advice.
