The Phoenix Suns might not be a squad you want to be betting a good deal this season at the sportsbook. They were an excellent squad last year, all things considered, but this year has introduced some sizeable adjustments that should be considered when making a sports bet.

And this is more than only an idle viewpoint. Guard Steve Nash doesn't even like his squad's chances heading into the 2010-2011 year. Phoenix might not even be a playoff squad this year which means they are not going to be a team you want to make an online bet on at this time at the sportsbook.

Nash said a short while ago that he's not picking his team to be a playoff team this year. When a player doesn't like his team's odds then you truly cannot like the team when you are gambling at the internet sportsbook.

This is a noticeable modification from what Nash was stating before the end of the 2009 season. Back when Stoudemire was still on the team, Nash was stating that he was genuinely thrilled about the squad and its probabilities. Back then he was thinking about the likelihood of making his 1st ever trip to the NBA Finals. They were only two games away from it in their series with the Los Angeles Lakers. Now, though, his irritation is showing through and he's proclaiming that the team will probably need to start all over.

Huge Drop for Suns - You might have already overlooked but the Suns got to Western Conference Finals last year. They could not get past the Los Angeles Lakers but there is no embarrassment in that as no one else may either. They put up a great fight before losing the series 2-4. The Phoenix Suns may have watched their greatest days though. They lost Amare Stoudemire and things do not look bright for the Suns in sports book gambling.

Alvin Gentry has a Challenging Position - There's no question that Alvin Gentry did a great job last year. He led the Suns to a 54-28 record and the Western Conference finals. He is not going to get the Suns that far this year. This season's squad is just not as excellent. The loss of Stoudemire is major. They took Hakim Warrick and Hedo Turkoglu in desires of replacing Stoudemire. That's not happening. Neither of those two participants can come close to carrying out what Stoudemire did. Nash has seen the writing on the wall and has claimed as much. There might have been some optimism if Josh Childress was well but he is hurt. The team is counting upon Nash to do all of it and he's not getting any younger. He turns 37 in February.

Bet Versus Phoenix - You ought to wager against the Suns this season at the sports book. When their best competitor does not like their probabilities, then you go vs this squad. It is Nash and a bunch of bench players. Jason Richardson can at times score, Grant Hill is a good person and Robin Lopez is decent center but none of them can score every evening.
