

Published based on Sunday Night Football Wagering - Dolphins Versus Patriots

Sunday Night Football Wagering - Dolphins Versus Patriots

In the final week of the 2010 Nfl regular season the Super Bowl odds frontrunners, the New England Patriots sponsor the Dolphins at Gillette Stadium. It is a fight of the AFC East, the Pats reigning in the top spot with a 13-2 record following destroying the Bills 34-3 on the road during the Christmas weekend. The Dolphins are third in the division with a 7-8 record following losing to the Detroit Lions 27-34 last Sunday.

A big storm has been dumping snow all over New England the past couple of days, but a little weather isn't going to hold Tom Brady back, coach Belichick, however, might. He hasn't stated yet if he will play his star qb in the seasons last regular match. They do not want to repeat last year's mistake of playing prize participants who are crucial to their playoff success, i.e. New England Patriots receiver Wes Welker who suffered a knee injury in the last competition which ended his year, and the Patriots odds at the championship title as the Baltimore Ravens stomped them on their own Bean Town turf. Tom Brady has been making waves, and records this year. Last week he added an Nfl record to his already impressive resume throughout New England's seventh straight win, which raised the Patriots' record to 13-2. Brady surpassed Bernie Kosar's mark of 308 passes devoid of an interception. Brady, who was 15-of-27 for 140 yards and three touchdowns, has made 319 passes lacking a pick. Because of this of the major win last weekend versus the Bills, the New Englad New England Patriots have won their location as the top seed in the AFC, and thus the home field advantage for the first three rounds.

As for the Dolphins, well, their owner, Stephen Ross, was definitely not pleased with their loss this Holiday weekend. He even went as far as to call his letdown incredible to The Miami Herald. Perhaps it was beause they wasted a late 10-point lead Sunday in a loss to last-place Detroit that left them 1-7 at home, matching the worst home record in team history. So now it's looking as though Ross will probably be finding a new coach to lead the way. Ross could cite a lot of reasons for changing coaches. Several supporters find Sparano's team not merely average but dull, with a conservative offense that tends to settle for field goals due to the fact the play-calling is designed to limit mistakes by inconsistent qb Chad Henne. The main question for this game is who competes for New England and for how long. Head coach Bill Belichick typically does not tell the media very much but there is little doubt that Brady won't play long if at all. Many of the other starters furthermore likely won't see much competition. New England might still be able to win and cover with the backups though. When wagering on nfl recall that the Miami Dolphins sadly, are last in the AFC in scoring.

Place your 2011 Superbowl bets at the on line sportsbooks now!

You can also find this article published on Sunday Night Football Wagering - Dolphins Versus Patriots, and on the tag pages AFC, home, new england, new england patriots, record, wes welker.