Sunday Night NFL Wagering - Browns Versus Jaguars

The Jacksonville jaguars are one-point favorites in Football online betting at the online sportsbook as they sponsor the Browns on Sunday. Cleveland is just 3-6 this season but gamblers like the appear of the Cleveland browns with Colt McCoy at quarterback. Cleveland has been very great since McCoy took the reins as the starting qb. The Jacksonville Jaguars certainly got a little luck last week in their victory over Houston but regardless if they had not hit the Hail Mary pass they still could have won that competition in overtime. If the Jaguars can win this match they would get to 6-4 and be a serious playoff competitor. If they lose this match they will fall to 5-5 and be a complete fraud when making a football bet.

The Browns are coming off of a heart breaking loss versus the Jets and the Jaguars were on the other side of the spectrum in their last second win against the Texans. Cleveland still has a solid running game and they might produce a sustained driving attack on the Jacksonville jaguars defense.

Peyton Hillis and the menace of Joshua Cribbs will be the driving forces of the Browns offense. Colt McCoy might be along for the ride but all he needs to do is stay error free. Eric Mangini, the head coach of the resurgent Browns, has tacked his hopes on his smash mouth type of offense and it may be the greatest method of operation for this teams makeup.

The Jacksonville jaguars defense is holding their own vs the run. They're enabling 120 yards per competition on the ground yet their pass defense is giving up over 260 yards through the air. Rookie Larry Hart will have to fill a big hole on the defensive line with Aaron Kampman being lost for the season with a torn ACL in practice. The Browns offense will have the edge running the ball at this fragile Jacksonville jaguars defense.

David Garrard, the Jaguars starting qb, has demonstrated glimpses of greatness this season but the absence of production of Maurice Jones-Drew has injured this squad. The run blocking on the offensive line is an issue this season but Garrard has been able to buy time in the pockets and complete passes. Jones- Drew is averaging less than 100 yards per match however the Jaguars running game is averaging practically 130 yards on the ground as a unit.

The Browns defense has been a reliable unit all season long and also their run defense has become their strong point. The Browns are allowing only 105 yards per match on the ground plus they are average vs the pass enabling 240 yards. Eric Wright was being smoked on every series at the start of the year but now he has selected up his game and has competed well in pass situations. The Jacksonville jaguars offense and the Browns defense is a wash.

The Jacksonville Jaguars are the negative one point favorites with the total over under listed at 42.5.
