

Published based on Sunday Night NFL Wagering - Detroit Lions Versus Dallas Cowboys

Sunday Night NFL Wagering - Detroit Lions Versus Dallas Cowboys

The Detroit Lions and Cowboys have lots in common as they get ready for this November 21st match. Both clubs are missing their starting quarterbacks for the remainder of pro football season and both clubs are considering a leading NFL Draft pick in the 2011 NFL Draft. The Cowboys are solid favorites in NFL betting internet at home. All it took was 1 win from Dallas and they alternate from 14 point underdogs to 7 point favorites in Football betting.

The Lions, the loser of a NFL-record 25 consecutive road games, will be taking on the Cowboys, the sole NFL squad this season who hasn't yet won at home. The Dallas Cowboys are feeling good about their future this year, while the atmosphere in Detroit isn't so pleasant. A week ago the Lions lost to a previously losing Bills in NFL football betting.

The Detroit Lions nearly broke their losing streak on the road against the Bills but their streak continues to be whole going into this match. The Dallas Cowboys performed with a restored vigor following the termination of their coach Wade Phillips. Now the Lions will have their hands full with a Cowboys squad that is holding out a desperate hope of earning an NFL Playoff Wild Card spot.

The Dallas Cowboys lack of a running game has destroyed them all year long. Just before Tony Romo was lost for the season, the Cowboys offense was still flat. The wide receivers at Jon Kitna's fingertips are quite a few, but he doesn't have sufficient time in the pocket to make things transpire. An amazing offensive line takes championships. A poor offensive line loses seven of 8 matches.

The Lions defense headed by rookie and back up kicker, Ndamukong Suh has stepped up this season as a top ten unit in football. Suh is joined on the defensive line by yet another inclusion to the Detroit Lions, Kyle Vanden Bosch. These two big D lineman have set the pace for the entire defense and it all starts and finishes in the trenches for the Lions. The Lions defense has an advantage over the Dallas Cowboys offense.

The Lions offense is up in the air with Matt Stafford gone for the rest of pro football year. If Shaun Hill can't go for this match, (elbow) it will be Drew Stanton. The Lions have still got significant offensive tools with Calvin Johnson up top on the major performs and Nate Burleson as the underneath receiver. On the ground, Jahvid Greatest and Kevin Smith are still good running backs that can be great occasionally. The Lions running game has been averaging 130 yards per match.

DeMarcus Ware may be the just Cowboys defensive competitor that has not had his heart questioned. Mike Jenkins obviously quit on a play 2 weeks ago against the Packers. This defensive unit was earlier under the instruction of terminated head coach Wade Phillips and their competition in the last few competitions under Phillips is what contributed to his ouster. The Lions and the Dallas Cowboys defense are a wash.

The Cowboys are the negative 7 point favorites, with the total over under at 46.5.

You can also find this article published on Sunday Night NFL Wagering - Detroit Lions Versus Dallas Cowboys, and on the tag pages consecutive road games, Defense, football, jon kitna, kyle vanden bosch, Lions.