Wildcard Weekend Philadelphia Eagles Against Packers

Michael Vick gets a second chance versus the Green Bay Packers this Sunday in the first week of the 2010 Football Playoffs when the Eagles host the Green Bay Packers. Green Bay finished the regular season in the 2nd spot in the NFC North with a 10-6 record. The Philadelphia Eagles finished off the year with the same record, at 10-6, but with the no. 1 in the National Football Conference East. Sportsbook posts the Eagles as the slight, minus 2.5 point home favorites with the total over under at 46.5.

The Green Bay Packers are in the playoffs because of their 10-3 win over the Bears in Week 17. Aaron Rodgers lead the way with a 1-yard touchdown pass to tight end Donal Lee which gave the Packers the lead in the last quarter, then Nick Collins' intercepted Jay Cutler, stopping the Bears on a late drive. And with this the Green Bay Packers guaranteed their playoff berth, the number 6 seed, and the game one against the Philadelphia Eagles this Sunday.

Michael Vick couldn't be happier as he gets the opportunity to take on the Green Bay Packers again, as he believes the Philadelphia Eagles never could have lost to the Green Bay Packers in the regular season starter if he might have been healthy enough to play the whole game. Vick started that competition at wide receiver for a gimmick play and ended at qb following Kevin Kolb endured a concussion. Vick was outstanding, close to rallying Philadelphia from a 17-point deficit. He threw for 175 yards and ran for 103 in his first given action in almost four years. When gambling on sports note that the Packers might have an edge against Vick this time around considering they know they'll be struggling with him. Defensive coordinator Dom Capers game-planned for Kolb the last meeting. Linebacker Clay Matthews knocked Kolb from the game with a hard hit, paving the way for Vick.

Additionally in recent Philadelphia Eagles news, Philadelphia Eagles coach Andy Reid informed reporters that middle linebacker Stewart Bradley, who's battling an elbow injury, could possibly be ready to play against the Packers in Sunday's National Football Conference Wild-Card Game. Though rookie fill-in Jamar Chaney has been productive in his stead, Bradley may return as a starter on early downs. He plays the run well, whereas Chaney is more successful sideline to sideline and in coverage Cornerback Asante Samuel will be nice and will start opposite Dimitri Patterson, who lost some snaps following a difficult game vs the Giants. With the Packers' offensive tendencies, a "starter" at cornerback won't matter much.
