Ever since the melt-down of Full-Tilt Poker, I have been thinking of going away from playing online and focus more on home games and Poker Supplies. This means it is time to start to research Poker Supplies! .

This video shows a presentation of what I bought. I also found a lot of good information at Copag Poker Size Regular Index Playing Cards.

I'm a cheapskate, so I do product research, lots of product research, before I make a buying decision on anything, which includes Poker Supplies. I look at everything like an investment: when I pay my money for something--a stock, a bond, an annuity, and even a sport's team--I want to make sure that I get my money back . My game room (now that we have moved and I finally have some man-cave space to have hobbies) is in need of an update. So, I started with what I would need to have a good card game. The first thing I would need is a place away from the rest of the household. Yes, this an easy part: my wife knows I need a space for myself and we finally have a nice place to play on our own. I have low standards of what something should look like, but even me, me, wanted to make this place special.

First on my list was to purchase a Poker Supplies and Copag Poker Size Regular Index Playing Cards. I did a lot of research and decided on some products . No game is complete without having the perfectly balanced poker chip: it makes any novice at any type of game feel like he or she is awesome when they finger a well-balanced chip. I would also need a billiard table since I love playing pool—plus, pool is a great way to make some easy bets: my favorite is when I bet if someone can make a shot for a dollar. I do this all the time and it works.

I never thought that this would a problem, but my hands aren't as nimble as they once were: I need a card shuffler . Twisted with age in the best circumstances, destroyed by time in the worse, we really can't shuffle cards that easily anymore. Arthritic hand slow down play so much and all I want is to speed u play. I hate when I have to play more slowly than I want . And, since we are all older-guys who only have a few hours of fun, we want to speed up the number of hands as much as possible. Besides, having a bunch of hand increases the likelihood I won't have to hear about anybody's children or grandchildren. So, I looked into having an automatic card shuffler.

I bought my stuff from here: poker supplies.

The products I referenced above so far have worked out. They are the best-selling in their industry and they are all from the best manufacturers in the industry.
