

Published based on Finding Your First Golf Clubs

Finding Your First Golf Clubs

Learning to play golf can be difficult; even more so without the right golf club set. Choosing the appropriate set of clubs for your body type is absolutely essential to your success in the game of golf. You need to make sure that you actually do choose the right clubs and not simply grab a "standard" set, no matter how complicated the process sounds. A standard set is made to match the average proportions of players. Let me assure you that very few people actually fit the average proportions. In order to make the right choice in golf clubs you must try out many different sets so that you can find the one with the best support for your swing. Picking the wrong set means that you can have a drastically off-balance swing. Golf clubs, by necessity are as unique as the person that uses them. so pick your clubs carefully.

The hardest part is figuring out where to start. Start with an estimated club length that will work for you. A good rule of thumb for the starting point is to pick a club as long as the distance from the floor to your navel. Golf courses typically have a wide range of clubs for rent. The main reason for having these clubs on hand is for beginners who are looking for their swing. You should be renting different brands of clubs as well as different sizes when you are at this stage. Bear in mind that subtle differences between the brands of clubs may matter almost as much as the length of the club.

Evaluate the clubs in two stages. Test the basic swing first. Rent your clubs and take them to the driving range just to get the feel of the swing. Once you have a set that allow you to make a comfortable swing with confidence, you move to the second stage of the evaluation.

Take the set of clubs that worked for you on the golf driving range out to the golf course to play a few rounds. It is during this second stage that you can start trying different brands to find out which is best suited for you. At this point, the question of having a custom set of clubs made for you often comes up. If you are a novice and your game isn't exceptionally strong, it is premature to think about a set of custom clubs. You need to have the game basics down, which can take years, and you need to be looking for ways to take it to the next level before you invest in custom clubs.

The obvious advantage of having custom set of clubs is that they are unique to your proportions. Since your build affects your swing and the customized clubs are made according to your build, they are the best clubs for your game. With this as a foundation the customized set of golf clubs will improve you game by taking the unique building block of your swing and building quality and accuracy in your game.

One thing you can do that will be of immense help is to talk to a golf pro. Not only can they tell what clubs will work best for you, they can also tell you what to do to make the right decision for your game. Choosing the right clubs is of prime importance in how well you will do in the game of golf so choose wisely. Now, if you could only do something about the slice in your swing.

You can also find this article published on Finding Your First Golf Clubs