Las Vegas: Disney World for Twenty Somethings

We all remember our first solo holiday, the butterflys over a couple of weeks with our mates, out of range from their watchful gaze, free to get up to whatever we want, within reason! Most of us will elect to go to a hot Eurpoean destination with sandy beaches, cheap alcohol and plenty of other likeminded youths out for a good time. This holiday lark often turns into an obsession and we take as many vacations as we can. As we age however we find it increasingly difficult to process the high alcohol intake and these type of 24/7 drinking and partying breaks begin to feel like much more of a chore! What to do then for the young, working holiday maker after a good time without the month-long hangover!

Las Vegas holidays are becoming an increasingly popular option for those in their early and mid twenties looking for an alternative to the Majorcas and Zantes of this world. While it would be a hollow statement to claim that Vegas has a rich cultural heritage, it certainly offers a unique experience, albeit one which re-produces famous landmarks from other countries! For the thrill-seeker looking for a holiday with it all! Las Vegas holidays are certainly not the answer! Vegas is all about excess, money and pleasure, the flashing lights, casinos and nightclubs are all geared towards giving you a brain-frying experience and emptying your pockets as quickly as possible!

You will get your just rewards for this financial outlay however, Vegas has some of the most impressive hotels in the world, putting New York holidays and Miami holidays Vegas is obviously infamous for its casinos and they alone are the reason that many people pay a visit to this one desolate dessert outpost! Savvy betting can earn you a few chips here and there but get over confident and your holiday will end up being a lot more expensive than you thought. Canny haggling can earn you a dollar or two here but get greedy and your holiday will end up being a lot more expensive than you thought! Vegas retains all the excitement of a Euro lads holiday while having a bit of class at the same time as well as offering other things to do than drink!
