

Published based on Planning a Golf Holiday Tour

Planning a Golf Holiday Tour

Nothing is more thrilling than family and friends taking a fun and relaxing golf holiday tour together. This great sport can be played all over the globe. As you consider the various destinations, you will find that you can choose from thousands and thousands of possibilities in foreign countries along with golf courses nearby your home town. There are many great courses that exist right here in America such as in California, Florida, Arizona, and North Carolina each have some of the best courses, as well as associated resorts and hotels.

However, if you prefer traveling abroad, then Scotland, Spain, or Portugal are considered top destinations. Take Scotland as a prime example. The golf courses are beautifully designed, providing excellent play. The groundskeepers work hard to keep the grounds in perfect condition and the grass green. In addition to pristine courses, Scotland is also known for incredible accommodations in castles and historical resorts.

When looking for the best golf destination, you will be amazed at how some areas seem to have a larger number of high rated courses. In fact, many cities have top courses within minutes from one another. Therefore, you could easily choose one location for your golf holiday tour but play on other courses too. That way, you have a home base as you enjoy greens on several golf courses. One option for a golf holiday is by signing up to participate in a mini-tournament. If you check at local golf courses, you will find that many offer this type of opportunity.

After a day on the greens, your family members and friends could all sit down and dine on mouth-watering cuisine created by a skilled chef. If the wives go along on the trip but are not golfers, they would still have a blast with excellent shopping or time spent at the resort's day spa.

The goal is to find the most, pristine golf course possible in a location you will also enjoy visiting. As you begin your search, you will be amazed at the vast number of famous courses to play. Often, a city will have several top quality golf courses within a 15-minute drive from each other. That way, you can play on one course and then try another if you want. You will receive the greatest benefit by having a golf holiday tour consisting of more than one course.

To help choose the right location, a golf specialist can provide you with all types of information. The specialist would determine your preferences and budget and then offer suggestions for the golf holiday tour that matches best. The list would likely include national and international golf courses, unless otherwise specified. This professional would also be able to tell you some of the high and lowlights of each course and if you want, work with you to organize the entire trip for everyone going.

You can also find this article published on Planning a Golf Holiday Tour, and on the tag pages golf, golf destinations, golf holiday, golf holidays, golf vacation, golf vacations, golfing.