Why 2010 World Cup will be one to remember making a guess about the winner of the 2010 World Cup on African soil is a hard task. Many people who have a great knowledge of football agree that its not about the best team but about the one that is going to be in better shape compared to the other ones. Its not uncommon that superpowers have experienced early exits or even outsiders progressing more than anyone could ever imagine.

Turkey managed to reach the semi-finals and finish 3d in the 2002 World Cup, which was something that not many people would expect. How many people could really predict that Italy was going to win the 2006 competition?? Of course there are some undisputed favourites as this is always the case but not seeing them winning the trophy should not be a big surprise. Historically, Brazil are the biggest favourites just because they have participated in all competitions and have won the trophy more times (5) than any other team. Germany and Italy are the second favourites to win it, although England, France and Holland have their chances too. Germany is a team to admire because one way or another they will manage to reach the semi-finals or even the final, without having nay of the worlds best players in their team.

Get ready for another memorable competition, especially after experts have fore-casted that summer to be one of the hottest ever. Theres nothing better than watching one of those games outdoors, either at a friends garden or at the backyard of a pub or a restaurant. So, all you need is a garden, someone to look after the bbq, a bright, flat TV screen, a pair of wireless outdoor speakers and your favourite people to be around. It would be fun even for the kids as they love being outdoors, running, jumping and playing with their rc helicopter or if you are lucky, just watch the game.

We are all looking forward to a great competition, where hopefully the best team is going to win and all those great players will offer unforgettable moments. So, find your perfect spot and get ready!!
